The Montana Site Stewardship Program is an organization of volunteers committed to preserving and protecting Montana's archaeological sites and resources.

What Do Site Stewards Do?

- Monitor archaeological sites in danger of deterioration and destruction through vandalism, natural processes, or other impacts.
- Use observation, field notes, drawings, and photography to record changes over time.
- Report any changes to the condition of a site to the professional archaeologist having jurisdiction over the site.
- Work closely with Federal and State agency archaeologists.

The program seeks volunteers with a strong interest in cultural resource conservation. Please contact Crystal Alegria at (406) 994-6925 or calegria@montana.edu for more information and/or an application form. Visit the webpage at:
